The Red Rocket and the Lost Planet

With a big hiss, the red rocket zoomed upwards to find the lost planet of Bump. Bump is made of food. It has cake for hills and ponds full of milk. The people look like little balls with feet. They are called Bumpits.

The Red Rocket and the Lost Planet

Mark and Fred landed the red rocket on the flat top of a marzipan hill. Rusty is stuck in the marzipan like a candle on a cake.

The boys did not get out. They felt tired, so they slept. They agreed to go exploring in the morning.

Bumpits crept up to the rocket. They bleeped and stared. Rusty looked just like a big stick of red rock to them. So they started to lick the red rocket. But Rusty tasted quite nasty, and soon they all started to feel rather sick.

In the morning, Mark and Fred got up and jumped out of the rocket. They stared at the fat little Bumpits. Mark poked a Bumpit, and it bleeped loudly. The poor Bumpits looked very funny, all rolling from side to side. It made the boys smile.

The Bumpits did not like that, and King Bump led them away. But the boys called them back, and they played hide and seek happily all morning. Then they all felt hungry. So the Bumpits took Fred and Mark to a park with

Bump picked lollipops for the boys to take home.

The planet of Bump is quite fantastic.
